Clinton reclaims presidency

John King
The Associated Press

President Clinton won a landslide re-election and political redemption Tuesday night as voters brushed aside Bob Dole's challenge to his economic leadership and character. Republicans tempered Clinton's triumph by holding the Senate and the GOP battled to keep the House, too.

Clinton polled strongly in every region for a coast-to-coast victory that made him the first Democratic president re-elected since Franklin Roosevelt. It was a dramatic rebound from the 1994 midterm elections that delivered Congress to the Republicans.

"They have affirmed our cause and told us to go forward," Clinton said of voters who returned him to office. Still, he acknowledged that Americans were bent on splitting the balance of power in Washington. "They are sending us a message: Work together," Clinton said.

Fireworks erupted after the president addressed a crowd of thousands jamming the streets of Little Rock, Ark. Vice President Al Gore called it a "glorious evening" and indeed the numbers were very good for the Democratic ticket. Clinton was on a pace to match if not exceed the 370 electoral votes he won in 1992, and he was close to the majority vote that eluded him in 1992.

"I wish him well and I pledge my support," Dole said in conceding the race, hushing supporters who booed Clinton's name. Dole and other Republican leaders took solace in returns

Kaptur savors victory

Supporters celebrate incumbent's re-election

TOLEDO -- A swarm of supporters gathered in the vast lobby of the Toledo Amtrak station to celebrate the re-election of District Nine Democratic Congresswoman Marcy Kaptur to the U.S. House of Representatives over Republican Randy Whitman.

"We feel very elated and very gratified," Kaptur said about her re-election. "I'm very thankful that the people of our community exercise their rights of citizenship."

Many of northwest Ohio's most prominent figures in Toledo, from Mayor Carty Finkbeiner to radio personality Denny Shaffer, attended the event. Kaptur's past success and loyalty has earned the admiration of her many constituents throughout the district.

"Marcy is probably the most grassroots, neighborhood-oriented and tuned-in congresswoman of all 435 people in Congress," Finkbeiner said. "She has been a phenomenal representative for her constituents both urban and rural."

Speaking at the Wood County Democratic celebration, Kaptur discussed her future goals.

"My biggest interest is in the economic future of the country because more families are getting farther and farther in debt," Kaptur said. "Pension funds, we have to concentrate on this, because over 90 percent of the people have no voice in the management of their pension funds. We have to find a way to give employees equal voice over their funds."

"She is bright, well-informed, responsive to her constituents and she's totally honest," said Frank McCullough, acting president of the Medical College of Ohio. "She works hard for her district and she's an outstanding woman in Congress today. She's very courageous."

Kaptur promises to continue working on the economic future of the country and concentrating on pension funds in order to give employees an equal voice over their funds. She also said education is important and will work for college students.

Clinton's tails aren't enough for Congress

The BG News

Despite the predictions of many pundits, President Bill Clinton's coattails did not have enough room for Democrats to take back the Ohio House of Representatives.

Chris Redfern, Ottawa County Commissioner, said he hopes the Republican House will not impede the progress of the president's bills.

"I hope that many of President Clinton's proposals get through. A Gingrich-led Congress will be more moderate. Middle America has spoken and they are moderate," he said.

Mike Marsh, University trustee and chairman of the Wood County Republican party, said he expected the Republicans to maintain their 1994-gained majority.

"People don't vote straight party lines anymore. People who voted for Clinton voted for Republicans for the House and Senate," Marsh said. "People, not parties."

Wood County Prosecutor Alan Mayberry said the coattails at the local level are too small to count.

"Coattails are minuscule this far down the ticket. For Senate and House races, yes. For prosecutor, no," he said.

GOP State Senator Bob Latta said the local issues provide better coattails than national candidates.

"I don't think the coattails go that far. A lot of it will be dependent on who came out for the local issues," he said.

Damage that cannot be repaired

These days, it seems as though more and more hate aimed at the media is circulating about. With explosive, sensationalized shows such as "Hard Copy" and tabloid newspapers such as "The National Enquirer" coming at the consumer on a daily basis, it often becomes hard to distinguish if the media is serving its job as "the watchdog" or merely stepping over its bounds to get any story that will sell.

An occurrence which put the media in a less-than-flattering light is the "accusation" of Richard Jewell, a security guard at the Olympic games, suspected in the bombing that took place on July 27 at Centennial Olympic Park. Jewell's name was leaked from an unknown source which drew a picture of Jewell as fitting the profile of a bomber, implying that he was an aspiring police officer trying to become a hero.

In a time where the media is having a hard enough time keeping a good reputation with the public, sensationalism and blown-up accusations of an innocent man don't help things along much.

The media is set up, essentially, to be a watchdog. However, when the media oversteps its own bounds and becomes an attack dog instead, trust in the media is lost. Often, it is hard to regain.

The News believes that sensationalism and swayed reporting have no place in 1990s media. It is a reporter's job to take responsibility for the credibility of his or her sources. Using half-baked sources in order to produce an explosive story is a poor journalistic practice.

Richard Jewell has every right to feel angry. His life will never be the same. For weeks, his home was staked out by the media and the FBI alike. Their actions were humiliating and disgraceful.

Prof. Phil Meyer, who teaches media ethics of at the University of North Carolina, says that the media simply reported what it was fed by law enforcement officials. He believes they shouldn't feel guilty for what happened.

Whatever the case may be, Jewell's life will never be the same. Someone needs to step up, take responsibility and help Jewell put himself back together again.

It often becomes true that "the pen is mightier than the sword."

If you didn't vote, don't gripe

Mike Wendling

A comprehensive list of bad reasons for not voting was given by students interviewed for an article in Monday's BG News. My goal is to debunk some of the myths that stop our generation from exercising any semblance of control over our collective future.

"I necessarily don't agree with the issues," said one student, when asked to give a reason why she does not vote. Her statement is baffling. Perhaps she does not agree with the way the issues are discussed, or the particular issues that are being discussed, but it is impossible to disagree with an inanimate, abstract "issue"?

If, as I believe is the case, the student does not agree with the particular issues that are being discussed, then I share her quarrel. The failing Social Security system is a pet peeve of mine, and yet the major presidential candidates have pretty much swept this particular issue under the rug. However, this did not keep me from voting yesterday.

The fact remains that the candidates do talk about a wide variety of issues. If Bob Dole or Bill Clinton have not said anything in the past six months that has not even mildly interested you, please check your pulse. If all else fails, glance at the platforms of the Republican and Democratic parties. If your interest is still lacking, schedule an appointment with the Wood County Morgue.

Another infuriating excuse for not voting was expressed by a BGSU senior. This fourth year student, on the verge of leaving the University environment, is completely ignorant of any political candidate besides the nominees for President of the two major political parties. She is ignorant—or has momentarily forgotten about—Ross Perot. And Ralph Nader. And the nominees of the Libertarian, Natural Law, Socialist and Communist Parties. And the dozens of state and local offices that were also up for grabs yesterday, to be filled by men and women who will have a greater direct impact on her life than anyone in Washington ever will. I must admit I do not know whether to laugh or cry.

Lack of time to register was another reason cited for not participating in the democratic process. Again, I am confused by this justification of laziness. I vaguely remember the minute or so it took to fill out a voter registration form.

On the other hand, the aimless recreational pursuits we college students take part in are, in my mind, quite vivid. To say that you do not have the time to register to vote is merely saying that you do not care about your nation, your community, and your fellow Americans. To all those who found something more important than registering, please die quickly so that those who do give a damn may have a chance to solve some of the problems that face us all.

There are other examples of poor reasoning to be found. One student tied her voting pattern to economics:

"Maybe I will vote when I'm older and paying taxes, but now it doesn't matter to me."

If this student is indeed paying no taxes, I admire her minimalist lifestyle. She must not purchase any goods or services, or have a job, or receive any sort of money from the government. The truth is, we students pay taxes every single day. If you did not vote yesterday, you should feel guilty, lazy or both. Not only have you failed to exercise a very special right (the majority of the earth's population has little or no say in choosing their leaders), you have lost the right to be upset with the results of the democratic process.

If you do not participate in our democracy, you cannot complain when tuition costs rise. You cannot express outrage when a White House scandal involving drugs, sex or both is exposed in the press. When cracks in our social services result in children starving, being beaten, and dying, the only emotion you should feel is the guilt of being too busy to care.

Fear not; democracy is an ongoing process, and it is only four years until the next Presidential election. In between now and then are several local, state and national elections. Next year, discard all of your see-through excuses and find the time to do the right thing—vote.

Your behavior is unacceptable

"Hell is others." -Jean Paul Sartre

As a life-long watcher of human behavior and a renowned "people watcher," I think it's safe and fair to say, people can be quite disgusting. I watch people all the time displaying boorish, rude and unnecessary acts of tastelessness.

This can be supported further by these instances I recently observed.

Last week, a middle-aged, well-dressed man was talking with a young woman. He casually reached into his pocket and pulled out his keys. He then stuck a key in his ear.

He nonchalantly and methodically began to pick his ear with his key while maintaining perfect composure. It looked like he was using his car key, which he turned and twisted with the skill of an oral surgeon.

He examined the tip of the key for his reward, and upon finding it, wiped the key on his slacks. He then proceeded to his other ear and performed the same task.

His expression during this process, which took about one minute, never changed as he continued to talk as if nothing were happening. The woman he was talking with didn't bat an eye, as if seeing this was perfectly normal.

This behavior is unacceptable. As punishment, this man should have his keys taken away, and never be allowed to carry keys again. No car keys. No house keys. Nothing. That should teach him.

I watched as a woman sucked, nibbled and feasted on her fingers for what seemed like hours. She chewed and bit her nails, then spit the nails on the floor.

If God materialized in front of her, she wouldn't have noticed, as her concentration and dedication was unwavering. Her fingers must have had some wonderful, tasty seasoning on them, making it virtually impossible for her to remove them from her mouth. Did she dip them in seasoned salt before class?

This behavior is unacceptable. As punishment, her fingers should be soaked in cat vomit. She then must suck her fingers. That should teach her.

While at the language lab, a girl behind me kept coughing incessantly. It wasn't your normal sounding cough, but a sound that should never be omitted from a human mouth. I don't know what she was doing in the language lab, as coughing is not a language.

It was like a sound a musk ox would make during mating season. I knew phlegm was involved, which upset me even more. If this sound was made by a warthog, other warthogs in the pack would be offended and annoyed.

My repeated angry glances and outbursts of "Don't you ever tire?!" didn't do any good. The coughing continued for an hour. This behavior is unacceptable. As punishment, she should wear a stethoscope around her neck.

Whenever the urge to make noise pollution strikes her, she must put the stethoscope into her ears and cough into the end piece. Her cough will be magnified many times, giving her an extreme dose of her own medicine. That should teach her.

I walked into a restroom at West Hall last week on a Monday morning. I was immediately hit by a stench of stale urine that made the hair on my arms fall off.

I walked to the urinals and noticed two of them were filled with dark, yellow urine. I flushed both urinals. The urine had begun to ferment, creating bubbles and an oily glaze on the surface of the water, like an oil slick on a driveway. A roach lay dead on the floor.

This behavior is unacceptable. As punishment, from now on, any rude, childish boys that don't have the intelligence to flush a urinal, should bob for apples in their own days-old urine. Tasty apples. That should teach them.

I was at the Rec Center last week. When done exercising, I took a hot shower and went to my locker to dry off. The radio was playing a silly, fun song, "Red, Red Wine." This was a nice song after a hard workout—easy words and an enjoyable beat. I began to sing along in my head, as I'm sure most people were.

All of a sudden, in the next aisle, a loudmouthed jerk began singing the song out loud. His booming and nasty voice drowned out any sound around me making it impossible to hear the radio.

Not only was his voice terrible, but he kept getting words wrong and adding words where they didn't belong. I'm sure this simpleton's intent wasn't to bother anybody, but to sing along with the song and enjoy it.

That's no excuse. This behavior is unacceptable. As punishment, this person should listen to every Neville Brothers album ever produced. That should teach him.

Latta defeats Redfern for Ohio senate seat

Dawn Keller
The BG News

PORT CLINTON -- Wood County Commissioner Bob Latta defeated Ottawa County Commissioner Chris Redfern for the 2nd District Senate seat Tuesday night.

Redfern said although he lost, he campaigned on important issues.

"We worked hard over the last 12 months. We know we were running on the right issues that are important to families in Northwest Ohio," Redfern said. There were two main differences that caused the result of the race, according to Redfern. Redfern said those differences were the amount of money spent on the campaigns and the fact that his opponent had a well-known last name.

"It's tough to overcome a guy with a popular last name," Redfern said. "We all know it's tough to run against a last name candidate. I knew that, but I did it anyway."

Redfern said there was a 2-to-1 ratio on the amount of dollars spent for advertising.

"The difference in the campaign was $250,000 in television and radio ads," Redfern said.

Redfern said he will continue to be a county commissioner for two more years and after that will keep his options open.

Mike Cook, research director for Redfern's campaign, said Ohio has not heard the last of Redfern.

Cook said Redfern ran a good race.

Latta was unavailable for comment.

Mayberry re-elected to County Prosecutor

Vince Guerrieri
The BG News

Alan Mayberry has weathered a vicious campaign to win re-election to a fourth term as Wood County Prosecutor.

Mayberry, who called this campaign against John Garand "the worst I've ever been involved in," feels vindicated with the results of the election.

"I hope it says that the voters are turned off by negative ads," Mayberry said. "I hope it sends a message that in the future the campaigns will be about the issues, not about how much money you spend."

Mayberry contends his opponent spent the most money on a countywide election in Wood County history, a trend that extended across the Democratic ticket. According to Wood County Republican Party Chairman Mike Marsh, the Democrats outspent their Republican opponents in nearly all of the county races.

"It goes to show that money doesn't mean everything," Marsh said. "It's the best candidate with the best ideas."

Mayberry said the money was not the issue, but the message was.

"He'd outspent me two-to-one, and mostly on negative ads, which I hope the voters have said, 'We don't like this,' " he said.

Mayberry said the source of Garand's money was a tangible issue as well.

"Over 60 percent of his money came from out of Wood County from attorneys and special interests," Mayberry said. "I don't think people outside should be telling us who the prosecuting attorney is."

Mayberry said the entire campaign was tough on him, in several ways.

"It's hard, I've got two little kids. My oldest has special needs, and it's been difficult, not to mention the financial strains," he said. "The voters have been supportive, though."

The support of the voters sends a clear message to Mayberry.

"I don't really have plans for changes," Mayberry said. "I'm going to continue with prevention plans we've started."

Mayberry then cited his aggressive prosecution, student mediation and the gang task force, which combats the spread of gangs, which Mayberry called "an emerging problem."

"We don't have a problem like Youngstown or Toledo," Mayberry said. "It's really youth violence prevention." Mayberry said gang-related graffiti and clothing styles have been seen around Wood County.

Carter retains position

Joe Boyle and Sarah Bednarski
The BG News

Republican incumbent Jim Carter won a decisive victory over Democratic newcomer Bruce Purdy in a closely contested race for Wood County commissioner.

Carter, a lifelong resident of Wood County, and former mayor of Grand Rapids, Ohio, said this election was unlike any he had previously experienced.

"I've been on the county ballot before, but this seems to be a lot more important to people," Carter said.

Carter said bipartisan support helped catapult him to victory in a county he said was "split down the middle" between Republicans and Democrats.

"The commissioner's race is high profile, and it's great to see people from both sides of the aisle accept my ideas," Carter said. "It's my goal to help the county."

The county government has many issues bearing down on the future, Carter said.

"There are a few things that may come down, like unfunded mandates and courtroom security issues," he said.

Courtroom security, which has become an issue since the April 1995 bombing in Oklahoma City, may rise to the surface as a costly issue.

"It would have an impact on everything," Carter said.

Purdy, 23, said his age could have brought a whole new face to the office of the commissioners.

suggesting that voters would keep the Congress in GOP hands even as they gave Clinton four more years.

"We're going to keep the Senate, we're going to keep the House," Dole said.

It was Dole's last speech as a candidate, ending a remarkable political career that included 35 years in Congress and a record 12 years as the Senate Republican leader. "Tomorrow will be the first time in my life I don't have anything to do," Dole said.

Reform Party candidate Ross Perot was a distant third everywhere and well below the 19 percent he won in 1992. He conceded defeat but was not ready to fade into the shadows. "We going to have to stand at the gate and keep the pressure on and we will," Perot said in Texas, looking ahead perhaps to 2000.

Victories in 30 states and the District of Columbia gave Clinton 375 electoral votes -- well above the necessary 270 and more than the 370 he claimed in defeating George Bush. An electoral landslide assured, Clinton had one last hope for the night: that Perot's candidacy would not cost him a majority of the popular vote.

Incumbents hold seats

COLUMBUS -- Dennis Kucinich, the once-disgraced "boy mayor" who presided over Cleveland's default, ousted Republican Congressman Martin Hoke and Rep. Frank Cremeans was locked in a nail-biter as the vote-counting continued into the early morning hours Wednesday.

With 77 percent of precincts counted in the 10th District, Democrat Kucinich had defeated Republican Hoke, 49 percent to 46 percent, according to unofficial returns tabulated by The Associated Press.

In southern Ohio's 6th Congressional District, Cremeans and the Democrat he defeated two years ago, Ted Strickland, were even at 50 percent apiece with 85 percent of precincts reporting.

Every other Ohio incumbent won, including the rest of the freshmen who had been targeted for special attention in high-spending contests:

■ In the 1st District in Cincinnati, incumbent Rep. Steve Chabot defeated Democrat Mark Longabaugh. In complete but unofficial returns, Republican Chabot had a 54 percent to 43 percent edge.

■ On the eastern side of the state, 18th District Rep. Bob Ney defeated state legislator and failed gubernatorial candidate Rob Burch. The incumbent Republican had 55 percent of the vote to Burch's 41 percent with all precincts reporting.

■ The 19th District in northeast Ohio, Rep. Steve LaTourette defeated Brook Park Mayor Tom Coyne. With 80 percent of precincts reporting, the GOP

With Hoke the only incumbent trailing, the trend line was for Ohio to retain a Republican-dominated congressional delegation.

Republicans retain control of Congress

GOP holds onto Senate control

David Espo
The Associated Press

Republicans held their conservative control of the Senate early Wednesday, laying claim to seats once owned by Democrats in Alabama, Nebraska and Arkansas. Majority Leader Trent Lott pledged a fresh effort to cut taxes and shrink government.

On a night generally kind to incumbents of both parties, Sen. Jesse Helms triumphed in North Carolina and Strom Thurmond coasted to a new term in South Carolina at 93.

In the marquee contest involving Democratic incumbents, Massachusetts Democrat John Kerry prevailed over Gov. William Weld.

Republican Sen. Larry Pressler was an exception, surrendering his South Dakota seat to Rep. Tim Johnson.

"We're going to go forward with the agenda we were working on," Lott said in an interview with The Associated Press. Republicans will cooperate with a re-elected President Clinton, he said, to a point.

"He talks about how the era of big government is over," the Mississippi Republican said. "We'd like to help him keep his word on that."

Fourteen races with no incumbent on the ballot guaranteed a big crop of newcomers to the Capitol, including Mary Landrieu, a Democrat who won in Louisiana.

After a bruising campaign that cost tens of millions of dollars, the GOP picked up seats in Alabama, where state attorney general Jeff Sessions triumphed, and in Nebraska, where Republican businessman Chuck Hagel won a Democratic seat in his first try at elective office.

The Arkansas victory was especially sweet for the GOP. There, Rep. Tim Hutchinson became the first Republican elected since Reconstruction -- and on the same night, and in the same state, where Clinton celebrated his own triumph.

In New Hampshire, exit polls indicated Dick Swett would unseat Republican Sen. Robert Smith. But Smith was leading where it mattered -- at the ballot box -- and Swett made a post-midnight concession of defeat.

"I've campaigned a long time. I guess I'll miss it," Thurmond said as he savored the prospect of his eighth -- and last -- term.

In North Carolina, Harvey Gantt spoke for vanquished candidates everywhere as he conceded defeat to Helms. "It is painful," he said. "It hurts not to win."

With Clinton winning a second term in the White House, Election Day interviews with the voters showed the nation narrowly split over whether Congress should be in Republican or Democratic hands. About 55 percent of the voters said Congress would not be too conservative if controlled by the GOP, though.

And about half said it would be too liberal with the Democrats in charge.

The exit polls were conducted by Voter News Service for The Associated Press and five television networks.

In a long night of vote counting, a handful of races remained unsettled well after midnight in the East, including the New Hampshire contest.

In Maine, Republican Susan Collins battled former Gov. Joseph Brennan; Republican Rep. Wayne Allard fought Tom Strickland in Colorado.

Election '96 The Senate race

Thirty-four Senate seats were at stake, including two in Kansas. Results:

Parties swap seats in House

Jim Drinkard
The Associated Press

Democrats made inroads Tuesday into Speaker Newt Gingrich's Republican majority in the House, but the GOP trimmed its losses by capturing seats vacated by veteran Democrats.

"It looks like we will almost certainly keep control of the U.S. House," Gingrich told a cheering crowd in suburban Atlanta. He said the two sides were "in the process of swapping seats."

Control of the chamber appeared likely to be determined by fewer than a dozen seats, the closest margin since Dwight D. Eisenhower was president.

Voter News Service, a consortium of The Associated Press and five television networks, projected the Republicans would likely retain control of the House. It would be their first back-to-back House majorities in 66 years.

Democrats won seven seats previously held by Republicans, five of them freshmen and three targeted by organized labor's expensive television ad campaign. Republicans defeated one incumbent and picked up five open Democratic seats, four of them in the South, but the Democrats successfully defended many more.

Indianapolis voters picked their first black representative, local township trustee Julia Carson, to keep Democratic control of the hotly contested seat of retiring Democrat Andy Jacobs with extensive help from organized labor.

Democrats needed a net gain of 18 seats to take control of the chamber and pinned their hopes on toppling GOP freshmen.

In North Carolina, freshmen Republicans Fred Heineman and David Funderburk, who rode into office behind Gingrich's "Contract With America" campaign in 1994, were turned out by Democrats David Price, a former congressman, and Bobby Etheridge.

Election '96 The House

All 435 seats in the U.S. House of Representatives were up for election this year. Party breakdown:

And in New Jersey, freshman Bill Martini lost to Democrat William Pascrell, the mayor of Paterson.

In New York, Democrat Carolyn McCarthy defeated freshman Republican Daniel Frisa in a race dominated by the issue of gun control. McCarthy's husband was killed in the 1993 Long Island Railroad massacre, and she took on Frisa after he voted to repeal a ban on assault weapons.

"All we were out to do was make something good come out of a horrible situation," McCarthy said in a victory speech. "I certainly have beaten the person I wanted to beat. ... I have beaten the NRA" (National Rifle Association).

Another victim was Chicago Republican Michael Patrick Flanagan, who reached Congress two years ago by defeating indicted Democratic power Dan Rostenkowski. He was ousted by Democratic state Rep. Rod Blagojevich.

Three-term Rep. Gary Franks, one of two black Republicans in the House, lost to Democrat James Maloney in western Connecticut.

Ohio voters bet against Issue 1

Brandon Wray
The BG News

Issue One, which would have legalized riverboat casino gambling in several Ohio counties, was rejected by voters yesterday. Kate Hubben, press secretary for the Yes on Issue One committee, said that there were three main reasons the issue lost.

"Ohio has low unemployment right now so people were not really interested in the new jobs that riverboat gambling would bring; people still had a bad taste in their mouths because of the Ohio lottery; and many people are just not ready to have gambling in their state," Hubben said.

Hubben added that Ohio will lose revenue to states like Pennsylvania who are probably going to legalize gambling soon. Ohio will be left in the cold, she said.

Alan Mayberry, Wood County Prosecutor, opposed gambling and was pleased that it was defeated.

"Even though it would have been in limited areas, it would have been an increase in crime, as well as family and social problems," Mayberry said. "To say it would have done anything for education is totally bogus."

Chris Redfern, a Democrat who ran for State Senate, said that Issue One was once presented as a savior for education funding, but it wouldn't offer anything but a short-term gimmick.

Randy Gardner, Republican

State Representative, said he doesn't think gambling will be on another Ohio ballot for a while. He added that gambling would have had a negative effect on Ohio in the same way it did in Atlantic City.

The Issue One debate was between Democrats and Republicans, churches and schools, and the working class and the middle class.

Law enforcement and the Attorney General's office were opposed to the issue, because they believed it would increase crime and hurt the local economy in areas where it would be legalized.

Galen Ash, Bowling Green police chief, said gambling would have increased crime, suicide rates and insurance fraud. He also said it is a myth that the local economy would have been helped. In Illinois, where it was legalized, people went from their cars to the riverboat casinos, and back to their cars when they were done, without using any of the local businesses, according to Ash.

Mayor Joe Koziura of Lorain, where one of the proposed casinos would have been, said that riverboat gambling would have meant an additional $186 million revenue for schools. It would also have created a lot of off-shoot revenue in the community, he said.

Riverboat casino gambling is legal in several Mid-western states.

Wives' tale is campaign headaches

Joe Boyle
The BG News

As candidates stump for votes at chicken dinners and pancake breakfasts, there is always a shadow, a presence seen by most, but not noticed: the presence of the candidates' wives.

Lisa Mayberry, whose husband Alan was re-elected as Wood County's prosecuting attorney, said this race in particular put a lot of strain on their family.

"None of the races have been as nasty as this," Mrs. Mayberry said. "It's very hard, it's a lot of time away from home. It's a lot of additional pressure."

Pressure Mrs. Mayberry said adds to the already stressful job of being the prosecuting attorney for a growing county.

Mrs. Mayberry said the campaign also takes time away from the couples' two children, Reed, 5, and Mason, 2.

"He's an involved father, and he's torn between family and what he's doing," she said. "Alan's a nice guy, and I'm happy for him, because he's doing what he cares about."

Sharon Carter, wife of Republican Wood County Commissioner Jim Carter, said the election had been a lot of fun for their family.

"Every weekend we'll eat three dinners on the road at functions -- sometimes even a breakfast. Occasionally we'll only have an hour between meals," Mrs. Carter said.

Mrs. Carter said she has had time to prepare for this campaign, since Jim planned on running for election from the time he was appointed as a commissioner a year ago.

"After his appointment, we started attending functions. He got involved in city council meetings and township meetings," she said.

Mrs. Carter said the experience in their campaign has been quite different than that of the Mayberrys in the highly-negative advertisement campaign launched by Mayberry's opponent, John Garand.

"Everyone seems to like Jim, and he was happy," she said.

The race for State Representative over with incumbent Randy Gardner winning against his opponent Dr. Tony Yap.

"I'm gratified with the numbers tonight. I must thank everyone who allowed me to serve in the state legislation. The strong margin is a vote of confidence," said Gardner.

Yap said he believes that he represented Ohio and he will continue to care and take an interest in the lives of children. One thing that needs to be changed, said Yap, is campaign financing because Gardner had all the advantages. If campaign financing was public knowledge, said Yap, the people would see that Gardner had more money.

Yap said that he will not run again for State Representative and he plans to continue his work with children and will work to stop political signs from being destroyed. It is unbelievable, said Yap, that this happened in a civilized society.

Students claim mixed reaction

Brandon Wray
The BG News

Students had mixed reactions to the election. More than 1,000 on-campus students voted at the Student Services Building.

Overall in Wood County, with all precincts reporting, 49,061 people voted -- 67.2 percent of the registered voters. Nearly 1,300 people voted at the off-campus polling places at St. Mark's Church and Ridge Street School.

When the results were tallied, more University students voted for Democrats.

Kerry Aulizia, College Democrats president, said crossover was needed for Democrats to win.

"In order for win, there was a lot of crossover, that means both presidential and local," Aulizia said.

Jeff Harris, senior political science major, said he voted for Bill Clinton because he talked about the issues.

Bob Dole mostly talked about irrelevant character issues, according to Harris.

Harris also said he voted against Issue One, the gambling issue.

"If people want to gamble they can go to Mississippi," Harris said. "I don't think it is a good for our state."

Many students voted for a candidate simply because they didn't like the other ones running.

Lesley Rinna, freshman accounting major, said she picked Ross Perot because she didn't like Dole or Clinton.

Matt Werner, junior telecommunications major, said he voted by absentee ballot for Dole last week because he didn't like Clinton.

"I don't like Clinton because he is a crook, he might go to jail for his role in Whitewater when the investigation is over," Werner said.

Werner said he voted for Issue One. He said it will do a lot for schools and create jobs. He added he doesn't think that crime would be increased.

Beth McPherson, freshman undecided major, said she didn't vote even though she is registered because she isn't educated about the issues in Wood County.

Danielle Frey, freshman hotel management major, said she did not vote because of Tuesday's weather. Also, she was sick and slept all day. Had she voted, she said she would have voted for Clinton.

Chris Friel, senior telecommunication major, said he did not vote because his absentee ballot did not arrive in time.

Although he didn't vote, Josh Plummer, sophomore art major, said he would have voted for Lyndon LaRouche as a write-in candidate.

University resolution covers students' voice

Daria Warnock
The BG News

Another lengthy debate proved somewhat discouraging to student representatives in the Faculty Senate Tuesday when an amended substitute resolution concerning the recruiting of faculty was passed.

The students were promoting the resolution for approval; however, an amendment added before the final vote changed the direction of the issue, according to student government leaders.

The new amendment reads: "Academic units may seek student, staff or alumni input in the deliberations of their screening committees. Such non-faculty members may be added to the screening committee in an advisory capacity by a majority vote of the faculty members of the academic unit(s)."

Janet Morrison, Graduate Student Senate president, said she feels mixed reactions on the approval of the resolution.

"I'm pleased that it passed, but I think it is still a frustrating process," Morrison said. "People perceive it to be a threat and it really isn't."

She said she believed student involvement needs to be valued more in the process of recruiting faculty.

Undergraduate Student Government President Tara Gore said she also had higher expectations for the resolution.

"I'm happy that the resolution passed and that we may include students in the process," Gore said. "But I'm discouraged that the wording of the resolution doesn't more explicitly encourage student participation."

Gore said she plans to submit an alternative resolution to the Senate Executive Committee, which would allow students to have voting privileges. She said USG plans to push the resolution until more definite progress is made.

Morrison explained to the Senate the importance of passing the substitute resolution as written, without compromise. However, an amendment to change the word "should" to "may" in two places in the resolution passed by a vote of 38-26.

Program keys on civil rights

Brandy Hunt
The BG News

Thirty years of civil rights will be featured as part of a three-part program at the Jerome Library throughout the year.

Part of the Jerome Library's 30-year anniversary, the Multicultural Affairs Committee will help celebrate the occasion hosting the programs, Issues in Cultural Diversity, featuring 30 years of civil rights. The first program, titled "The Legislation," will be held today in the library conference room between 10 a.m. and noon. The topic focuses on the laws that have evolved from the civil rights movement. The discussion will be led by Don Nieman and Lillian Ashcraft-Eason from the University History Department.

"A Tribute to Martin Luther King, Jr." is the second program and will be held Jan. 22. Eddie B. Allen Jr. will be discussing his series from the Toledo Blade titled, "America in Black and White."

The last program, "Benefits to One and All," will be held March 5.

"It focuses on how not only African Americans but all Americans have benefitted from this movement," said Mary Wrighten, assistant professor of Multicultural Affairs Services.

Wrighten said the event will help promote diversity.

"From programs like these we get the sense of the commonalities we have, what makes us all Americans," she said. "The purpose of these programs is to make the library aware and sensitive to diverse needs of the community. We see this place as a place where everyone comes, and we can't give the best service if we're biased."

Wrighten said she hopes the programming in cultural diversity will build community and make a more positive diversity.

"We hope many people will come and make use of the programs so the theme of what we're doing here is not lost," Wrighten said.

Jerome Library will also be celebrating its 13th anniversary in other ways During National Library Week, from April 14 to 18, there will be raffles, food, and entertainment.

Food service lengthens hours

Evening access extended in effort to improve campus life

Jay Young
The BG News

The weekend hours of the University Union are being increased by administration starting Nov. 8 to provide students with campus food service later in the evening.

Union Director David Crooks said the Union will remain open until midnight on Friday and Saturday nights. He said food will be available from the grill line, but not the pizza shop. Ed Whipple, vice president for Student Affairs, said the administration will evaluate the change at the end of the semester.

"What I would like the Union to do is experiment through the rest of the semester keeping open the food service so students have a place to go," Whipple said. "It's real important that the Union is open and they have access to food services. Students have to have a place to go and hang out."

Provost Charles Middleton said the move is intended to improve campus life.

"It's a part of our follow-up effort to emphasize the residential aspects of the campus," Middleton said. It's up to the students to show there's a real interest in this in a significant way."

Whipple and Middleton said they are counting on student interest to help supply the extra revenue it will take to increase the hours.

"The Union should take in extra money because it's going to have sales, but whatever the case may be, we will make sure that the Union doesn't lose any money because of this change."

Crooks said the Union will do the best it can with its current staff.

"We're going to provide as many services as we can on Friday and Saturday throughout the balance of the first semester," he said.

Crooks said it is possible that new revenue will cover the additional costs.

"I think Friday night there's a good chance of it, because we used to be open to 11 p.m. on Friday nights," Crooks said. "Saturday night is an unknown quantity for us in terms of business that is out there."

Company to reevaluate Union

Jay Young
The BG News

The University will pay $73,700 to a Cleveland company to help determine the best way to improve the Student Union.

Williams Trebilcock Whitehead will do a feasibility study to examine what people want and the options available.

Richard Bauschard, project leader from Williams Trebilcock Whitehead, said the effort will include data gathering and meeting with groups on campus who would use the facility.

"What we're going to do is we're going to look into what the real needs are," Bauschard said. "We will come in with an open mind and get to know the campus and the student body."

Bauschard said Williams Trebilcock Whitehead has developed similar plans for about 20 other universities. He said the study will take about four months and will include an extensive look at food services.

Ed Whipple, vice president for Student Affairs, said the company will also consider the University's economic situation while developing the plan.

"They're going to look very carefully at our financial picture and say, 'Based on what your institution can afford, you're best to go either this way or that way,'" Whipple said.

Whipple said the final report will be given to the Union Project Committee for additional consideration.

Union Director Dave Crooks said he hopes the study answers the concerns about space on campus.

"We would like them to tell us what is the best location for a student union at Bowling Green State University. If that location is the current union location then we would like them to tell us what it would cost to renovate the existing Union," Crooks said.

"I'm convinced the existing building is not big enough to meet the needs of the community."

The Union was built in 1958 when, according to Crooks, about 7,000 students were enrolled at the University.

The University Board of Trustees approved up to $75,000 for such a study at their June 27 meeting.

Dance Marathon seeks support and participants

Tanya Markul
The BG News

Students are preparing for the second annual 32-hour Children's Dance Marathon which will start March 15.

"We broke a record last year for the first-time dance marathons in the United States," said Chris Rutter, Director of the Dance Marathon. "The record was $32,000 and we made $45,000."

This year the dance marathon coordinators are going to try to break another record by involving all students and all organizations instead of only fraternities and sororities.

"Greeks were ninety-percent of the marathon last year. This year we are going to try to get dorms and everybody else involved," Rutter said. "We want this to be a big campus event."

The Dance Marathon is sponsored by the Children's Miracle Network to benefit the children of Northwest Ohio at the Medical College of Ohio and gives students a great opportunity to get involved as well as a memorable experience, according to Rutter. According to Todd Phelps, Dance Marathon assistant director, last year's marathon had a variety of music, a DJ service, activities and games to keep the dancers busy.

He said there was also food and drink available, which was donated to the marathon from various places.

Most importantly, the families and children being sponsored are also there for the dancers to interact with, Phelps said.

"The marathon is the children's big thing, they really look forward to it," Phelps said.

Citizens in Zaire take up looting

Karin Davies
The Associated Press

GOMA, Zaire -- Rebel soldiers who took control of eastern Zaire in a three-week battle handed out free strawberry sodas Tuesday to Zairians during a cease-fire.

Frightened civilians emerged from hiding spots for a glimpse of the Rwandan-backed force that drove the Zairian army west into the forests. The bolder ones took advantage of the lull in fighting to break into stores and loot even the light fixtures.

The wreckage of war was easy for all to see: Looters skirted a pool of blood at a supermarket to steal shelves. The hospital morgue was streaked with sticky blood, the wards nearly empty because no one wanted to risk their lives and stay.

Red Cross volunteers wearing thick black gloves, yellow rubber pants and masks in the past five days have collected 371 bodies, mostly men killed in battle, and piled them up at a cemetery for burial.

Walls around town are pockmarked by bullets, many of the windows shattered.

People of all ages -- from small children to old men -- took part in a looting spree, carting off what the Zairian soldiers left behind on their retreat from Goma like books and dishes from hotels; even light bulbs and electric cords were pried away by the crowds.

"I am happy, and so is everyone else," Musoro Bongano said of the change of power in and around Lake Kivu. "The Zairian soldiers are gone -- they harassed us and stole from us. The rebels don't."

A Zairian rebel stands guard at a roadblock in downtown Goma, Zaire while a couple of children carry boxes of looted goods Tuesday.

Denis Kamundu, gesturing at the street, wondered who was going to repair all the damage: "My older sister's house was destroyed by a mortar, and her car was stolen. She will never be able to afford to get those back."

Outside a tourist shop children danced with traditional masks stolen from the store. A small boy cracked open a box to help himself to some books.

Teen-age boys crawled through a broken iron gate at a hotel to steal everything from red-vinyl folding chairs to dirty laundry. Napkins were scattered on a terrace like over-sized confetti.

"They're taking everything," a hotel employee said, sadly.

U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees headquarters looked like a garbage dump -- files were strewn across soiled carpets, doors ripped off hinges, computers stolen.

Although the disciplined and organized rebels tamed the Zairian army, they could do little about the looters but occasionally fire into the air to scare them off.

Indeed, in the spirit of the day, rebel soldiers at a warehouse that others had broken into gave strawberry sodas to passers-by. They also helped distribute UNHCR rations to hungry people.

Asked about why they fought for control of areas north and south of Lake Kivu, each replied in kind in a variety of languages -- English, French and Swahili: They joined the Alliance of Democratic Forces for Liberation to oust President Mobutu Sese Seko.

"Mobutu is a bad man. He is a dictator. We have no democracy," said Abele Totad, an armed and uniformed rebel outside the UNHCR. "He discriminates against people. He treats us like animals."

Valentine Moboya, a political science student, said he, like the rebels, dislikes Mobutu because "he's ruined the country. Zaire was once rich and prosperous, but now it is very poor."

Although Tutsis have been at the focus of the rebellion, the guerrillas in Goma were an ethnic mix -- Banyamulenge, Banyarwanda, Kasai, Babembe, Hunde. Some wore uniforms scavenged from defeated Zairians, others wore T-shirts and jeans, one had an army shirt with a price tag still attached.

A few said they had previously fought to the south in Uvira or Bukavu, but most had been north in Kivu for months, moving munitions into place and preparing for battle.

Yeltsin fine after bypass

Candice Hughes
The Associated Press

MOSCOW -- Boris Yeltsin's heart bypass surgery was a success Tuesday and surgeons predicted a full recovery, easing anxiety that has hobbled Russia for months. Yeltsin could take back his powers and the nuclear button in two days, but may not go back to his office until the new year.

There were signs the president's heart was in worse shape than the Kremlin had let on. Dr. Renat Akchurin, leader of the 12-man surgical team that conducted the seven-hour coronary artery bypass operation, said the number of bypasses "significantly exceeded" the expected three or four.

He refused to be specific. "I'd tell you immediately if I had his permission," Akchurin said. "It's his personal business."

Yeltsin's long illness has left Russia with a part-time leader at best and spawned power struggles among presidential wannabes. Financial markets trembled at rumors about his health and the government, by many accounts, was near paralysis.

Dr. Yevgeny Chazov, head of the Moscow Cardiological Center where the operation was performed, said there were no complications during the surgery. Dr. Michael DeBakey, the American heart surgery pioneer who is a consultant on the case and who trained Akchurin, declared it a success.

Boris Yeltsin

"I would predict the president to be able to return to his office and perform his duty in perfectly normal fashion," said DeBakey, who watched the operation on a monitor outside the operating room with a team of American and German consultants.

It could be a day or two before Yeltsin, 65, is well enough to reclaim the presidential powers, including control over Russia's immense nuclear arsenal, that he handed off to Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin before the surgery.

"He is going to decide that for himself," a weary Akchurin told reporters. "Most probably it will happen tomorrow or the day after."

Akchurin said Yeltsin would likely remain on a respirator overnight to minimize the chance of complications. The president's postoperative treatment depends on how soon Yeltsin is breathing on his own, he said.

A presidential spokesman said Yeltsin regained consciousness about five hours after the operation.

season. The Falcons play Toledo Saturday in a game at Bowling Green High School.

Falcons hope for strong finish

Coming off back-to-back wins over the weekend, the Falcons will look to finish the season strong against its remaining three MAC opponents. They'll start by hosting I-75 rival Toledo this Saturday.

Bowling Green will be looking to avenge an earlier defeat at the hands of the Rockets. Toledo beat the Falcons Oct. 4 in four games 15-5, 14-16, 15-7, 15-6. "I do expect to match up well with them," head coach Denise Van De Walle said. "We lost to them earlier this year. I don't want to say there is a revenge factor, but we will be looking to play better against them."

Since that October meeting against Toledo, the two teams headed in opposite directions. Toledo has dropped to a 5-9 MAC record, while the Falcons have fought their way out of the conference cellar and now have a 4-10 record in the MAC. The Falcons are tied with Akron for eighth place. The Rockets are only one game ahead in seventh.

The goal a few weeks ago was to win five of the final seven. While at the time that seemed to be a bit of a stretch, it now is within reach. BG will look to make hay against Toledo, before taking on Western Michigan and Ball State on the road.

"It does look realistic," Van De Walle said. "We need to win two of the final three matches. Our first opportunity is against Toledo."

The match will be held at Bowling Green High School due to Parent's weekend activities. Although it is a break from the normal, Van De Walle does not think it will bother the team.

"We have played there before," Van De Walle said. "Our freshmen have never stepped on the floor there, but I don't think it will matter."

Last Week

The big surprise happened last Friday. Bowling Green beat the then 9-3 Central Michigan Chippewas in three straight games.

It wasn't just the win itself as much as it was the fashion. The Falcons blew Central out in the first two games, 15-4 and 15-6. Central made the third game closer at 15-12.

After the game, a displeased Central head coach Terrie Robbie refused to comment.

The offense was very balanced, coming from multiple sources. Freshman Heather Murphy led the team with 11 kills. Lori Kemmerer and Lori Hilton both had ten. Setter

"Getting to the NCAA tournament and winning at least the first round is the ultimate goal," Mahler said. "But we're not looking past the MAC tournament. We know that that will get us where we want to be. They clearly see that to get to the tournament, they've got to win the MAC title, so their focus will be on winning the MAC tournament. "We were expected to win the MAC this year. We did, and now we're expected to win the tournament being the number one seed, and it's just going to be a matter of going back and working that much harder in the next week and a half to get ready for that."

Since BG is the first seed, they draw a bye in the first round. Their likely opponent in the second semifinal round will be Miami University. Miami holds a

MEN'S BASKETBALL

The Bowling Green men's basketball team finally got to play something other than inter-squad competition Tuesday night, and they enjoyed it.

The Falcons played their first exhibition game, hosting Transblok-Dinamo team from Novosibirsk, Russia, and crushed them 103-45.

The tempo was set from the opening few minutes. The Falcons' pressure defense created multiple turnovers, turning them into points. At one point BG held a 16-0 lead.

In fact, Transblok-Dinamo was unable to put the ball through the cylinder until the 12:53 mark of the first half.

"I thought we really executed what we worked on in practice," said Falcon guard Antonio Daniels. "In particular our defense. That's our overall focus this year, to put a lot of pressure on the ball, and create a lot of turnovers and layups."

"We had an inter-squad scrimmage that started the same way," said head coach Jim Larranaga. "With our veteran squad being able to jump out and score a lot of points off our defense, in transition, and that's what we've spent our time doing, working on defensive pressure."

Daniels led the scoring with 23 points, including a 3-pointer and six dunks. Anthony Stacey and Jay Larranaga scored 19 and 18 points, respectively. Larranaga hit four of eight 3-point attempts.

Stacey led the club with nine rebounds. DeMar Moore had five assists to lead that category.

Three Falcons did not dress for the game. Kirk Cowan was out with strep throat while Dayon Ninkovic and Tony Reid were held out due to missing classes.

"The goals that this team has set are very high, and they include academic goals," Larranaga explained. "A couple of guys missed class. They had what I think they felt were good reasons, but I told them we can find excuses for all mistakes, too, so we'll try to correct that immediately and set an example."

Transblok-Dinamo was led offensively by Oleg Bulancev. Bulancev wracked up 14 points, including two three pointers -- double the next best total.

As lopsided as the score indicates, it could have been a lot worse as Bowling Green eased off in the second half. Their first half shooting percentage was .611.

The Falcons will play another exhibition game Nov. 15 against the D.C. Explorers. They open the regular season on the road against James Madison on Nov. 23.

WOMEN'S BASKETBALL

It was a smile worth a million rubles.

The sheepish grin that Bowling Green's Bridget Andrews flashed to those giving congratulations spoke volumes as to what had just transpired in Anderson Arena. The junior guard's 15 points had just led the Falcons to an 81-52 victory in an exhibition against Slavyanka.

Andrews connected on seven of her 12 shots from the field in BG's women's basketball opener. She also led the team with four assists and grabbed four rebounds as the Falcons sent their opponents back to Tchelnyabinsk, Russia with the sour taste of defeat.

The game was tight throughout the first half. Slavyanka was able to lurch ahead of the Falcons on a couple occasions, but were never able to sustain a lead. The horn blew at halftime with Bowling Green holding a 36-31 advantage.

The Falcons came out of the gate strong, though, in the second half, shooting off on a 9-2 run. This put their lead into double digits, and it never fell below that. With ten minutes to go, the Falcons reeled off a 15-3 spurt that finished off Slavyanka. The Russians didn't come within 26 points the rest of the way.

Throughout the game, the Falcons were victimized by a number of back-door passes and fast breaks by Slavyanka. Despite that, BG's coach Jaci Clark was pleased with her team's defensive effort, a facet of the game that plagued the Falcons a year ago.

"If you look at our stats from last year," she said, "we weren't a very good team on the defensive side of the floor. We need to continue the intensity we had on defense."

Bowling Green's defense did not allow more than 10 points to any one individual, and a stifling pressure in the second half held the Russians to an anemic 20 percent shooting percentage.

Andrews noted that she and her teammates made a concerted effort to crash the boards in search of second-chance points.

"We had everybody comin' to the boards, except our point guards," she said.

Every player on the Falcon roster saw playing time in the first game action of the year. A pair of All-MAC juniors played significant roles for BG, as guard Sara Puthoff tossed in 14 points and forward Charlotta Jones snatched six rebounds to pace the squad.

Soccer's focus shifts to tourney

The MAC tournament may be more important than everyone thought.

The conference tournament at Mickey Cochrane Field Nov. 15-17 might make or break a Falcon NCAA tournament bid.

The MAC is one of 10 conferences whose tournament winner will earn an automatic bid to the 32-team NCAA tournament. Other teams invited to the tournament will be based on play-ins and at-large bids.

"There are eight or nine quality teams in the region ... I don't know if there's any room for at-large [bids]," said Falcon coach Mel Mahler.

Mahler pointed to Indiana, the fourth-ranked team in the nation who the Falcons beat earlier this year, as the Big Ten favorite. Among other teams in the Big Ten that will be contending for tournament slots are Michigan

State, Wisconsin, and Penn State.

The Falcons went 3-0 against Big Ten opponents this year, beating Indiana, Michigan State and Ohio State by scores of 2-0, 3-0, and 3-0, respectively.

The Falcons, now ranked 10th in the Nation by Soccer America, might reasonably expect to get an at-large bid, but there is no guarantee.

All this means one thing to the Falcons: the focus will need to be

Women's tennis building confidence

Almost three weeks after Bowling Green's 9-0 shutout of Youngstown State, which head coach Penny Dean noted as a confidence builder, the Bowling Green women's tennis team (1-0) will travel to Bloomington, Ind. for the Regional Rolex Qualifier.

The qualifier runs Thursday through Sunday at Indiana University's Indoor Tennis Center.

This tournament qualifies players for the Rolex Nationals somewhere in Texas in February. The top two singles, as well as the top doubles team, qualify for the Nationals.

This tournament will be the final tennis event for the fall season.

BG will send five singles players, four of which will make up two Falcon doubles teams.

The five singles players will be Cindy Mikolajewski, Deidee Bissinger, Julie Weisblatt, Jenny Cheung, and Jenny Schwartz. Mikolajewski and Bissinger will be one doubles team, while Cheung and Schwartz will make up the other team.

Dean views this tournament as a big deal to get into, so it's something for the players individually to qualify for in the fall. She noted three goals for the players while in the tournament.

The first goal is to have great competition in every match in the tournament.

The second goal is seeing other Mid-American Conference opponents.

"We see other competitors and it helps us maybe in the winter to visualize what we want to accomplish or to see other players in our league that we thought were unbeatable are beatable," Dean said.

Third, Dean said this tournament would be a good sendoff for the fall season and should keep the players psyched up for the spring season.

After the tournament, the team will be off for almost three months until Feb. 7.

the first two games. Eastern battled back to win the third game 16-14, and was on the verge of forcing a fifth game, but let the fourth game slip away 15-13.

Record Breaking

Setter Wendy Watkins set a new mark for assists in a four game match Saturday. She totaled 66 assists against Eastern, which is a career high for her.

She now has 1,037 assists this year, and 1,235 assists in her career. That puts her fifth in team history for career assists. Two more assists, which will probably come this weekend, will move her into fourth place, ahead of Barb Baker.

Kemerer is MAC Player of the Week

Freshman right side hitter Lori Kemerer recieved MAC Player of the Week honors.

Kemerer piled up 28 kills during the previous weekend. She had 10 in the win over Central Michigan, and 18 against Eastern Michigan. Kemerer also posted solid defensive numbers with 26 digs and nine total blocks on the weekend.

Kemerer has really come on as the season has progressed. Five matches this year she has led the team in kills. Many other times she has been a close second to senior middle hitter Lori Hilton. So far she has accumulated 300 kills on the season.

tunity to participate in the NCAA tournament was sent a packet of information, and we filled that out and sent it back," Mahler said.

"The NCAA will look at seating capacity, and I think if we have good turnouts crowdwise - if we can put some fans in the stands on Saturday [and Sunday of the tournament] - those things will bode well for us to host.

"There is a financial matter as well ... we feel that our athletic department is 100 percent behind us and they'll work to do whatever they can to insure that.

"Hosting a first round game is very, very important. ... If we are fortunate enough to be in that situation, I feel confident that the players will handle it very well, home or away."

MAC to open branch office

The Associated Press

TOLEDO -- The Mid-American Conference, committed to expanding its membership starting next fall, announced Monday that it will open a satellite office in Cleveland by the end of the week.

MAC Commissioner Jerry Ippoliti said the office was opened to create greater media awareness of the conference, identify corporate support in the area and to cultivate alumni contacts.

He also said that the MAC will "most likely" host a number of annual events in the city. The finals of last year's conference basketball tournament was held not far from the MAC headquarters in Toledo.

Two of the MAC's 10 members - Akron and Kent - are within an hour's drive of Cleveland.

Associate Commissioner Rob Fournier will work out of the office.

"This satellite office is part of Phase I in a series of programs designed to create more awareness and exposure for the MAC in major metropolitan areas," Ippoliti said.

Starting with the 1997 football season, Marshall and Northern Illinois rejoin the MAC. SUNY at Buffalo is expected to join the league the following fall.

Coach admits 'some sort of problem' at BC

Jimmy Golen
The Associated Press

NEWTON, Mass. - Boston College coach Dan Henning acknowledges "some sort of a problem" with players betting on football games and hinted suspensions were imminent.

"We're dealing with a situation here where the NCAA has a rule, and there are going to be some individuals here that are going to live with some kind of problem if they have bet on a game," the embattled coach said Tuesday.

"That's not my major concern. My major concern is if anybody on our football team has bet on our game and against us. That's an indefensible position."

Henning said two players, Kiernan Speight and another whom he did not identify, had asked out of practice Monday and would sit out again on Tuesday. Speight has denied any gambling.

"He (Speight) doesn't feel like he could practice football as long as his name has been put up like that," Henning said. "That's unfortunate. But I certainly understand his feelings."

"If they're not named or if they're innocent, they'll play" Saturday against No. 17 Notre Dame, Henning said.

Speight and three other Eagles sophomores were involved in a heated confrontation with Henning and the team's student captains on Saturday after rumors of point-shaving and game-fixing surfaced.

Athletic director Chet Gladchuk said there was no evidence of any wrongdoing.

Cooper asks for end to point spread talk

Rusty Miller
The Associated Press

COLUMBUS - Oddsmakers list second-ranked Ohio State as a 29-point favorite at Illinois Saturday. That doesn't mean coach John Cooper wants to read or hear about it, though.

"One thing I would do, if I could get you guys to cooperate," Cooper said to reporters at his weekly news conference Tuesday, "is to not print the odds and point spreads in the paper. It would eliminate everybody talking about it: 'Hey, you're a 25-point favorite. Do you think you ought to be favored by 25 points?' Otherwise we would not even know about it. But it comes up all the time."

Gambling on campus is a hot topic, considering what is happening at Boston College. Officials are looking into allegations of a point-shaving and betting scandal involving football players.

Cooper said he and his staff and Ohio State administrators go to great lengths to prevent players from getting involved in gambling.

"Everybody in college football is concerned, and if they're not, they should be," Cooper said. "We talk to our squad and we have people talk to our squad and they get daily reminders."

"Our players know how we feel about it. We try to cut down on as many outside influences as we can. We don't have strange people hanging around the locker room or training room."

He added, "You hope it's not happening. I wish I could guarantee it's not happening. Obviously I can't do that."

Cooper also addressed another topic confronting the sport, the lack of a retirement program for assistant coaches.

As a past president of the American College Football Coaches Association, he said he was disappointed the organization did not get behind a one-game national championship.

"We're leaving $50, $70, $100 million on the table that could be put towards a retirement fund for assistant coaches, AIDS research, minority scholarships or women's athletics," he said.

Cooper spent 14 years as an assistant coach at five different schools before becoming a head coach in 1977 at Tulsa. He's never forgotten what it's like to be an assistant, and still feels compassion for those left without a job when the higher-paid head coach gets fired or resigns.

"The saddest thing you do in my profession is to go to the national coaches convention and see assistant coaches out of work," he said. "It's sad to see a 55-year-old guy out of a job. It's a young man's game."

Cooper also discussed his own team.

■ On an ankle injury to starting quarterback Stanley Jackson: "If he's healthy and can practice, he'll start. But it all depends on how healthy he is at game time."

Jackson is wearing a special support boot to restrict movement to his sprained ankle.
